Woodland trails, green meadows, views, bluebells, remote country pub

In Brief

This typical Chiltern walk has some of the most impressive beechwoods and mixed woodland you will see anywhere on these walks, all the more unexpected since it starts at a very accessible spot just off the busy A4 road. The magic begins with a short stroll "Round the Hill" and leads off on a long unbroken woodland trail to the little village of Warren Row. In late spring this area gives a wondrous show of bluebells. The crowning point before lockdown was the sudden discovery of a tiny pub* hidden in the forest which you come to almost by accident. More woodland and a glorious green meadow path lead back to the start. (* The Dew Drop inn re-opened on 5 August 2022. To enquire, ring 01628-315662.)

? All the paths used on this walk are well-trodden footpaths, so there is very little undergrowth and only one small patch of nettles to worry you. Most people encountered on these paths were wearing sensible walking shoes although in wetter months boots are usually essential. Apart from two crossings of the A4 road, this walk is perfect for your dog too.

The walk begins in the village of Knowl Hill Common, just off the A4 road, west of Maidenhead, Berks, www.w3w.co/swift.dockers.assemble, postcode RG10 9YE. The starting point for this walk is opposite the little church, in the side lane called Knowl Hill Common, near the Royal Oak pub. There is a dirt strip at the start of the lane next to the cemetery. The Royal Oak has a generous car park and there's no warning notice but it is probably unfair to use it on a busy day, even if you are going to buy food or drink in the pub when you return. For more details, see at the end of this text (→ Getting There).

The Walk

- 1 Walk along the lane away from the main road, passing the Royal Oak on your left. The lane is subtitled Round the Hill for a good reason. Opposite Hope Cottage, fork right on a signed footpath onto the grass. Head for the top far left-hand corner of the grassy slope. At the top, turn left on a track and, in 15m, keep to the right of an end-of-line electricity pole. Your path crosses a driveway and continues directly opposite, squeezing you onto a narrow path to the right of a wooden outhouse. (If the nettles are high and you are wearing shorts, you could go round by the road on your left.) You emerge through a gate onto a tarmac driveway by White Cottage. Turn right and follow the drive until it joins the lane. Keep right on the lane, finally coming out to the main road.

- 2 Turn left on the main road, crossing to the other side when there is a break in the traffic. Immediately after a forsaken building (the remains of an inn) turn right on Canhurst Lane, marked as a byway. The lane quickly becomes a track. (Just before this point, on the left-hand gate post there is a plaque saying the flints used in the posts are from the 1st Century, i.e. of early Roman origin.) Where it bends left, continue straight ahead through a kissing-gate on a woodland path. You will glimpse a waste management plant through the trees on your right, part of the old quarry, which you will be skirting, mainly unseen, at a good distance. After 300m, the wooden, then metal, fences on your right end. Ignore a footpath on the right here and continue onwards. The path goes through a swing-gate [Nov 2024-2025: rotting on floor]. Ignore a newly-signposted path on the right here and turn abruptly left on an unsigned path into the woods. Your path descends into a deep valley of oaks followed by tall ash. After 250m on this path, you reach the bottom of the valley by a ditch, an old metal gate on your left and a junction with a yellow marker arrow. (From May 2023, there is a metal fence on your right, making straight ahead the only option.)

3 Continue ahead up the path until you reach a large gate. Turn right here onto a wide walking path with a wire fence on your left. After about 15 mins' walking, the path brings you out to a junction with a fingerpost. Keep right, as for Knowl Hill and, in 25m, keep right again. You pass the wrought iron gates of Bowsey Manor and join a tarmac drive, passing a chalet-style house and a long mossy clad house on your left. Opposite this long house, at a signpost, turn right through a very large wooden gate on a footpath signed to Warren Row. Ignore a path to your right and keep straight ahead. You are also on part of the Chilterns Way (CW), an awesome circular long-distance path.

4 This wonderful long woodland path through this part of Bowsey Hill is easy to follow provided that you keep to the right on a level path and avoid veering off left downhill. Eventually the path descends to go over a brick bridge. If you go down to look at the bridge off on the right-hand side there is a brass plaque that says "Mike's Bridge - Like Humpty Dumpty he sat on a wall, fell asleep and had a great fall - Summer 1995"; no one knows who Mike is or what happened to him or indeed why the plaque is there, but it keeps the locals guessing. Finally the path leads you through a kissing-gate. Follow the drive past houses on your left, coming out to the road in the village of Warren Row.

5 In 250m, avoid a private drive on your left and keep right on a wide grassy track. You have great views to your left over the Thames to the Chiltern hills, explored by so many other walks in this series. At the next signpost, avoid a footpath on your right and keep left between fences and more lustrous horse pastures. At the end, go through a wooden swing-gate near a house. Turn left away from the house and, in 10m, avoid a swing-gate on your left and keep right. This path quickly leads out onto a wide open hillside. Veer right on a path across the top of the hillside, heading for a large brown-coloured house, with more views to your left. The brash white faux Georgian mansion in the valley is Quelm Park, a very private residence. In the far top corner, go through a swing-gate and follow a path between tree plantations. In 150m, your path turns right between rails and meets a crossing bridgeway. Turn sharp right on the bridgeway, quickly reaching, as if by accident, the Dew Drop Inn.

The “Dew Drop Inn” is like a highwayman’s hang-out, hidden in the woods, although in the present century the whole of the car-owning neighbourhood seems to have discovered it. There should be an “I trekked all the way here!” badge which guarantees you a bench seat. This is a Brakspear pub with reliable ales. Food is of the comfort variety and sometimes the kitchen staff break off to join in the celebrations. The pub’s own garden provides vegetables and herbs; and they cure bacon, make sausages and keep chickens. On a summer’s day you may be entertained by Morris dancers. Note that the pub is closed on Mondays and in the afternoon on weekdays.

- 6 After possible refreshment, resume your direction along the tarmac drive and, at a T-junction at the top, turn right (re-joining the Bridgeway Circuit). Where the drive shortly bends right, keep ahead on a wide woodland path. In 200m, you meet an oblique crossing path with a fingerpost and wooden gate on your right. Turn sharp left here on a stony path uphill between posts, the start of a long ascent through the woods of Ashley Hill. Keep straight on upwards, going over a crossing path. You have re-joined the Chilterns Way (CW) for a short spell. After 150m the gradient gets easier and you reach a fingerpost under a beech tree. Fork right here, thus leaving the CW.

- 7 You pass the modestly-named Keepers Cottage on your left. Just after the house, ignore a signed footpath on your right and continue ahead, on a wide path, going gently down under tall pines. Your path crosses a rutted forestry track and finally comes out, through a wide gap, onto a green hillside with distant views. Keep straight ahead down the right-hand side. Part way down, your path passes through two metal gates, continuing along the left-hand side with the open meadow on your right. At the bottom, keep left to go through another large kissing gate. Veer right across the gravel drive and go through the left-hand of two metal gates into a horse paddock. Cross straight ahead on a clear path, passing through a metal gate into a second paddock, aiming for the little church steeple of Knowl Hill. At the far side, go through a large kissing gate and cross a smaller meadow diagonally to go through a gap onto a minor road. Turn left to the main road and cross to the other side. (The footbridge is compulsory for the schoolkids but rather a palaver for normal adults who can nip across easily.) Turn right, passing the school and a side of the church, then left into the side road, near the Royal Oak, where the walk began.

Getting there

By car: Knowl Hill is on the A4 trunk road. The route most people will use is via the M4. Come off at exit 8/9 as for Henley and follow the A404, still for Henley. In 2½ miles, turn left onto the A4 as for Reading, soon going over a roundabout. In just over 2 miles in total, you pass under a long tall footbridge. Immediately after, just past a small church, turn left on Knowl Hill Common.

By bus/train: bus 127 runs between Maidenhead and Reading, stopping at Knowl Hill, not Sunday. Check the timetables.
