Pristine natural common, woodland, heath, great views

In Brief

This is the most perfect and delightful short walk in a little-known part of West Sussex. At first you take narrow paths across the pristine natural eco garden of Stedham Marsh (but on good paths). Then you climb very gently for a ridge walk around Woolbeding Common, using some rarely-used paths with stunning distant views into Hampshire and beyond.

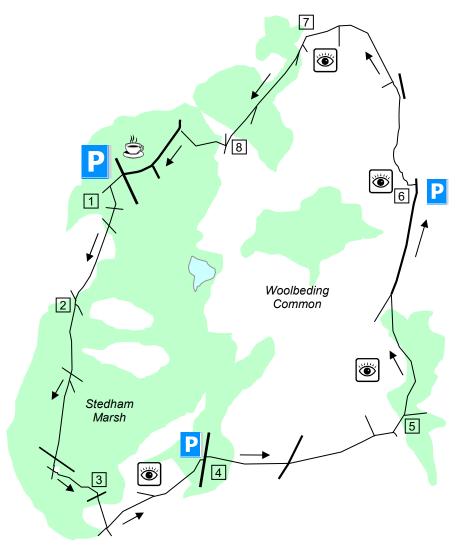

The Redford Coffee Lounge is sadly closed but we have kept the title Teashop Walk, with the extra word Picnic added. If you haven't brought a picnic, you can get refreshments at the Rising Sun in Milland or in Daisys Tearoom in the centre of Liphook.

We found no nettles on this walk but there is a certain amount of undergrowth in the first section. The paths are reasonably dry in an average ? summer when any kind of stout shoes should be fine, but in damper weather boots are essential. Your dog is also very welcome on this walk.

The walk begins in the village of Redford, near the old garage, postcode GU29 0QF, www.w3w.co/flukes.extension.boggles, opposite a redbrick building and a green phonebox. There is plenty of off-road parking. An alternative start is the NT car park beside the main road about 750m=1/2 mile south on the right. For more details, see at the end of this text (→ Getting There).

The Walk

Starting from the village centre, walk south on the main road (i.e. with the Redford Garage on your right) for just 20m to a fingerpost. Turn right here to enter the Common. Note that you are on the Serpent Trail, a sinuous long-distance path running from Haslemere to Petersfield. In 50m, just after a marker post, turn left on a beautiful winding narrow grassy path, soon across open ground. At a new 4-way fingerpost, continue straight ahead. You have woodland on your left and an open space with bracken on your right. At a fork, keep left to go over a grassy spot. Immediately, at a fingerpost, keep ahead on the path that veers right, avoiding the rather overgrown path that forks away on your left.

Example 2 Keep to this path that winds its way through a serene woodland of oak and birch, soon avoiding a minor path on your right. You need to step over several fallen logs and branches, a symptom of an untouched forest. Soon you have an earth bank on your right and your path zigzags right-left to cross to the other side [2023: stepping over fallen tree trunks]. Shortly after, you meet a post with a yellow arrow to reassure you that you are on the correct path. At the same time, the path becomes a little clearer. You reach another 4-way fingerpost followed immediately by a fork in the path. Take the right-hand path, once again avoiding a rather overgrown path that forks left. (To avoid the next overgrown section, walker suggests a different alternative: 30m after this right fork, turn left on a narrow path which, after another 20m, starts to lead uphill. This path bends left and right as it rises finally coming out on a wide crossing track by a new 4-way fingerpost. Turn right on this wide crossing path and in 5m turn left and, in 15m, go through a metal gate. Re-join the walk in Section 3 at point marked [*].)

- 3 Shortly, your path reaches a wide unmarked grassy path. Cross this path and continue over on a narrow path. You quickly reach another 4-way fingerpost just before some rhododendrons. Turn left here on a path that goes gently uphill between brambles and bracken. [Jun 2018-2020: a walker reports this path is very overgrown with bracken and there is a much clearer path, (just before? the path described here), which leads up to the same fingerpost.] Your path curves left, then right, and climbs under a massive oak tree to reach a wide crossing track by another 4-way fingerpost. [Jul 2020: the path originally described was totally overgrown. A walker offers the following alternative which is in regular script (with the original version retained in grey).] Turn left here soon arriving at a 3-way fingerpost. Turn right here and, in 15m, go through a metal gate. [*] Cross the field diagonally heading for the top left hand corner to go through another metal gate. Turn left onto a clear path. Continue onwards to reach a small car park and the main road (an alternative start).
- Cross the road to a signposted footpath opposite by a NT sign for Woolbeding Common. Your path leads gradually uphill through bracken. After 200m, you meet a narrow tarmac lane. Cross straight over the lane on a signposted footpath. You soon reach a track with a farm gate on your right. Go straight ahead, keep to the right-hand side of the open area, going past a house. Your track veers right to skirt round a gate that leads into a meadow. Where your track bends right to another house, keep straight ahead past a marker post and through a barrier. At a post on your right, ignore the yellow arrow pointing right and keep straight on, thus leaving the official footpath.
- Shortly, your narrow path passes a meadow on your left. This is an exquisite section of the walk as you continue with views left, through a woodland of mature birch and oak trees, on a path which is gentle and easy (although overgrown in some places with holly). Your path finally comes down to the same tarmac lane. Turn right on the lane to continue your direction. In 250m, you reach, on the right, the Woolbeding Common car park. Opposite the car park, turn left into a grassy space. There is a bench affording great views and a brief rest. Butser Hill, with its antenna, is visible ahead.
- 15m before the bench, turn right on a narrow path between bracken. (If the undergrowth is very damp or scratchy, you can stay on the lane.) You have great views left into Hampshire. Your path takes you through bracken and gorse and may seem too overgrown at first but walkers have found it quite clear. Suddenly you emerge by a seat near the lane again. Avoid the downhill footpath left and the lane and instead keep straight ahead on a wide sandy path. This path leads round the bowl-shaped ridge of the Common with more stunning views. At a clump of bushes, keep right or left, always staying on the high path. Avoid any paths leading down until finally you reach a fine rustic bench with great views.
- After a possible breather, continue onwards, keeping left past the bench onto a very narrow path. In 20m, keep right avoiding a very narrow path going downhill. After 10m more, your path makes a steep descent over tree roots and levels again for another 10m. Your path now leaves its straight descending course and turns you right on a wider path into trees. This is a perfectly clear path, although it is quite steep at first. After nearly 200m, you come to a distinct fork in the path. Take the right-hand fork. Your path goes down, steeply in places, under oak trees, then yews. You reach a 4-way fingerpost near Barnetts Cottage.

Avoid the path very sharp right and take the second path on the right, which is like a normal right turn, also incidentally another part of the Serpent Trail. You come down to a tarmac drive. Turn left on the drive, keeping right at a junction, quickly arriving at the road in Redford, next to the redbrick building and green phonebox where the walk began.

Getting there

By car: To get to Redford from the London area, take the A3 and turn off through Liphook. (From London, this is through the Hindhead tunnel.) At a tortuous series of mini-roundabouts and larger ones, keep following signs for Liphook Station and/or the Hollycombe Steam Collection (with a brown tourist sign showing a merry-go-round). This will take you onto the Midhurst Road out of the town. The road goes over a railway bridge past Iron Hill and the Steam Collection, and under an arch. About 3 miles from Liphook, ignore a left turn for Fernhurst. After 0.4 miles, turn left on a lane signposted Redford and/or Linch Church. The road goes past this interesting little church and after a mile it goes through Redford, as indicated by the welcome sign. Park on the right near the old garage, opposite a redbrick building and a red phonebox.

You can instead go through Haslemere on the A286 and turn off west at Fernhurst. Note that in 2013 this road was closed.

By bus: bus 93 runs between Midhurst and Milland, Tuesdays and Fridays. Check the timetables.
